Wouldn't surprise me to see border controls and other restrictions of movement claiming to be due to "covid". Get there early if you can.

Not gonna lie, but it's possible they could pull a 9/11 on a few of those planes.

They don't want you coming. But don't let that stop you.

"Let's Roll."

They'd have a hell of a time on a Pede filled plane, lol. Cockpit doors reinforced now, most flights have either air marshal and/or a gun in the cockpit.

Any plan is going to suffer disruption. Plan at least two layers deep. I'd advise traveling in an RV or some other method where you're not stuck relying on a static rendezvous point.

Airline employee here. To what capacity is nunya but I will be doing my part to get flights there. My success is not guaranteed, but if this is going to happen we need pedes in high places. I volunteer to be one of them.

I will be working that day in the Midwest/NE coast, pushing aluminum to IAD/DCA/BWI. As much as I want to go and March, I know I can contribute more at work than another warm body in the crowd.

Not all airlines/airline employees are cowardly cuck pussies.

I am in SoCal and have a southwest reservation which can be altered to come into another airport. Getting in on the 4th - so as long as the airport is within 1,000 miles of dc, should still make it. Wanted to take the 26 foot RV and bring 4 or 5 guys but wife won't let me.

She's paranoid about the drive and something going wrong with the motor home (I'm not mechanical), bad weather, etc. although it's in perfect shape and only 3 years old with 35,000 miles on it.

EDIT: Changed my departure date to 1/3 so there is time to fall back to the RV plan if airports are shutdown. I would think though if they try to do monkey business with travel, Trump could override with an EO to force them open.

There are a lot of ways how you can be sabotaged, planes canceled, gps service going down, google maps going down, cell service going down, so prepare to rely on the infrastructure, especially the online portion as little, as possible. Take a paper-based map, food / water, radio, anything you can think of to make you having to rely on things outside of your control as little as possible.

And bring your guns, of course.

– dkcndnshahxufhdfkgo 4 points 15 hours ago +4 / -0

Paper maps are a great idea. Burner phone with Open Street Maps would be a good middle of the road option. OSM works offline if you download the map ahead of time, just need GPS. Assuming that's not disrupted as you mention. I don't think current GPS satellites have Selective Availability, so it's all or nothing.

People have to bus in. That's the only possible way. Hotels can cancel your book. They have a few billion dollars that Hotels would rather pay you to cancel the room if Soro's money can make it up. You can sleep in a bus as a last resort. You should come with 20-30 people together.

Fly, drive, walk, RV, bus, hitchhike, motorcycle, etc. Now is not the time to be afraid or be talked out of going because muh flight might get cancelled, muh room is too close to BLM plaza, the Metro is too dangerous, muh finances, panteefuh, muh guns, etc. PUT YOUR BIG BOY/BIG GIRL PANTS ON AND FUCKING GO. STOP IT WITH THE WHINY LITTLE BITCH EXCUSES. YOUR PRESIDENT NEEDS YOU. HES NOT SCARED AND YOU SHOULD NOT BE EITHER.

Can't believe airlines will cancel flights. COVID has really hit their bottom line. They need our $. But you might need a backup due to weather. Keep a check on the weather closer to the time of your departure.

Retired Airline Employee here. First of all it costs money to cancel a flight. Second, you have a crew assigned to your flight. They need to get to where the flight is terminating, to catch another flight. You start stranding crews, and you have a big logistical mess. The only thing that would affect the flight is bad weather. The airline does not cancel in weather - it is the FAA that cancels the flight. Another thing, if a flight cancels the airline will protect you on another flight (could even be a different airlines). They want you out of there, and on your way.

Even if they don't cuck out I sense there will be a tremendous over book of flights, they like to do that on a good day when there's no politics involved. If you can possibly come in in waves from the 3rd till the 6th it will alleviate this potential issue.

I dunno. They took a good financial hit for Covid. I wouldn't be surprised if they just want the cash.

Keep in mind a lot of the larger planes have been grounded. Every plane I've flown in since March has been small. I went to Houston in one with 13 rows of seats just a couple weeks ago. I'd be more worried about flights selling out fast.
